Schoolcraft College— A Tradition of Success

Dear Friends of Schoolcraft College,

It is with genuine pride and pleasure that I report to you about The Tradition of Success here at Schoolcraft College. Each year, thousands of students of every age take part in a learning experience at Schoolcraft. It may be to achieve a degree in one of the professional trades, a certificate, or it could be the stepping stone for transfer to a four-year institution. There are also many non-credit courses for continuing education and professional advancement. Regardless of the reason, we are here to provide outstanding classroom, clinical and hands-on training with the very best faculty and state-of-the-art technology available.

Our success is grounded in the achievements of our students, faculty and the communities we serve. This report will share a few of these stories so that you become aware of the positive life-changes that began at Schoolcraft College. On the following pages, you will meet former students, current faculty and community leaders who represent the accomplishments that arise from hard work, perseverance and a good education.

Our main campus and two additional sites are vibrant with technology, educational innovation, and personal enrichment. Schoolcraft has become a leader in online education to ensure flexibility and convenience. As you'll see in the testimonials from former students, the greatest fulfillment comes from the one-on-one relationships that our caring staff and faculty build with their students.

Thank you to all who have supported us in the past year. We could not do any of this without you. We look forward to the tradition of success in the years to come.

Schoolcraft Grads Make a Difference

Officer Scott Hockenberry wanted to be a policeman when he was a little boy. He followed his dream and graduated from Schoolcraft with an associate degree and soon after completed his bachelor's in Criminal Justice Studies at the University of Michigan, Dearborn campus.

Unfortunately, he completed his education and eligibility for licensure at the same time that cities all over Michigan were experiencing layoffs and budget cuts. Keeping close to his goal, Hockenberry worked as a security guard and in retail loss prevention until he went to the police academy. This training is a mandatory 16-week course that is physically and emotionally demanding and offers no guarantee of a job. His patience and perseverance paid off and he worked at the Huron-Clinton Metroparks Police Department for five years. Then he received the call from the City of Plymouth hiring him as a full-time officer on the night shift.

"Working nights is more hands-on police work, which is what I wanted," said Hockenberry. "I love my work. I get to be involved with the community on a positive level. We talk to the downtown business owners, the shoppers, the visitors from other cities."

In December 2018, he was recognized as Officer of the Year by the Rotary Club of Plymouth.

"Working in Plymouth is a great fit. I get to see cases through to the end. I remember as a kid seeing fire trucks and police cars and wondering what was going on. Now, I'm part of it. I know what's going on and I love it. Every day of my job is different."

Schoolcraft Was the Right Choice

James “Jamie” White knew that going away to college was not an option. Community college was his only chance to avoid heavy debt, learn to be an independent student and get a good education. “I’ve worked out of necessity since the age of 14. Schoolcraft was the only option for me to be successful. I switched majors three times and didn’t lose a thing like you can at a university,” said White.

White graduated from Schoolcraft and then completed a four-year degree at Eastern Michigan. He is now the manager of the business intelligence team for Yazaki North America.

“We compare different sets of data to gain insight about trends or to provide analytical data for business reporting,” said White. “It’s an intellectual field with a global team in five locations around the world.”

Yazaki North America is combining all data sources under White’s direction. He has learned about cultures from seven different countries, which is an important part of his team dynamic. Every day is a new challenge and there is no shortage of projects.

A strong work ethic and the desire to succeed fueled White’s success, but Schoolcraft College played a major role in his education. “Two or three of the best teachers in my life were at Schoolcraft,” said White.

John Pelletier started at Schoolcraft after high school. He then left and returned after a stint in the Air Force, marriage and the birth of his child. The flexibility at Schoolcraft made it easier for him and his working wife to merge their hectic calendars.

“It was my personal goal to finish at Schoolcraft. Then I was on my way to a four-year business degree from the University of Toledo,” said Pelletier.

He went to work at Yazaki North America as a fork lift driver and worked his way up through the ranks, in supply chain management. “Yazaki is very big on education. I earned promotions and their help with tuition,” said Pelletier. “I left college with zero student debt.”

Every day, Pelletier’s job as a senior buyer is challenging. He is responsible for obtaining quotes from external suppliers for various projects while he oversees a multi-million dollar budget that covers everything from roofing repairs to parts and equipment.

“I use what I learned at Schoolcraft every single day in my job, from communicating with all levels of people to problem-solving,” said Pelletier. “Schoolcraft makes the most sense financially and to prepare for the future.”

Executive Chef at SavannahBlue

Christopher McClendon worked for his father in the restaurant business since the tender age of 11 in the coat room, opening doors and as a dishwasher.

McClendon worked hard and opened his own restaurant at age 19 in Detroit. He kept that business afloat, but barely. A friend of his suggested that he meet Chef Shawn Loving, who owned a very successful restaurant in Farmington.

“I had $68 left to my name. My girlfriend and I went to his restaurant. I had never had a meal like that before in my life. I asked to meet the chef, but he had already left for the day. My opportunity with Chef Shawn was gone,” said McClendon.

The girlfriend’s father called Kathleen Daelemans, who had helped launch The Food Network. She took the time to advise McClendon.

“Kathleen Daelemans convinced me to go to Schoolcraft. So I went and they had just opened the VisTaTech Center and I was part of the first class to use the place,” McClendon said.

On his first day of class at Schoolcraft, the chef was sick. Chef Shawn Loving taught the class instead. Although protocol dictates that one never approaches the chef, McClendon wasn’t aware of that rule as he tapped Chef Shawn on the shoulder and started asking questions. Chef Shawn graciously gave McClendon his phone number and told him to call. “I called him every day,” McClendon said.

Chef Shawn taught McClendon how to understand the business side of culinary arts. “I wanted to be around chefs whose skill levels intimidated me. I begged Chef Shawn to let me work free at his restaurant two days a week. I knew I could learn what I wanted from him. He soon hired me. He is my mentor, my brother.”

“Schoolcraft changed my life. I got access to an amazing group of chefs. I got to see excellence in real-time. I was there. They walked the walk and talked the talk. Not on TV, nothing second-hand,” said McClendon.

Professional Trades Are For Girls, Too

Shelly Riley truly loves to work with her hands, but she had no idea that it would lead to making a decent living as well. She graduated from Michigan State University and worked as a facility buyer for MGM Resorts International in Detroit, where she also managed construction contracts and capital equipment purchases. She had taken a high school class in construction technology and loved it.

“I was ready for a change and did a search online for welding schools. Schoolcraft College popped up,” Riley said. “I took stick welding at Schoolcraft, loved it and kept going. The school was close by and inexpensive. Good thing because even though I had two years of free room and board at MSU, I still had more than $20,000 in student loans left to pay. I couldn’t afford more debt for school.”

Riley currently is the lead welder at Hamilton Engineering in Livonia. Hamilton recruited her halfway through her courses at Schoolcraft and gave her a job and tuition support until she finished her welding courses.

“The world needs iron workers, pipefitters and boiler makers. There is always work and plenty of overtime because welding is everywhere. You see the effects every day in lamp posts, bridges, dinnerware, cars, you name it,” Riley said. “I also had no idea how much science, chemistry and physics was involved with welding.”

Riley is back at Schoolcraft taking courses to become a certified welding inspector (CWI). She added, “the salary potential is unlimited and I have found my niche. Welding can take you anywhere, it all depends on how far you want to go.”

The job forecast for welders has never been better. As far as being female in a male-dominated industry, Riley said, “You can’t base your happiness and future on what other people tell you to do. Go into professional trades if that’s where your interest is. Never stop learning. My CWI courses are taught by a woman at Schoolcraft and there are two males and two females in my inspection class.”

Local Entrepreneur Gives Back With Every Sale

Schoolcraft College graduate Josh York is the founder of York Project in Detroit. With each sale of his popular streetwear that includes shirts, jackets, sweats and caps, a portion is put aside to provide essentials to the homeless in Detroit.

“As a kid, I was always making things and selling them. I made skateboards to sell and had a tee shirt business in high school,” said York. “But going to Schoolcraft College is 100 percent the reason why I knew what to do and had the money to start my business.”

York thought he’d go to the University of Michigan and study engineering. “All my friends were going away to school and I wanted to do the same thing, but I didn’t have any idea what major I wanted,” said York. He compromised and chose Schoolcraft so he could determine which path was right for him.

York worked hard and got involved with campus activities. “When I was a student ambassador for Schoolcraft, I learned exactly how to do what I do now at our pop-up store and for our permanent store that opened in Detroit in August 2019. I learned how to deal with a diverse group of people and their expectations. I learned how to speak to different audiences and know what they expected in return,” said York.

York graduated from Schoolcraft without student loans and went on to MSU. “I have friends who are trapped in jobs they hate because they can’t afford to change and still keep up with their student loans. Because I also had a job during high school and college, I had the money for a start-up and could invest in my own company.”

Today, York is taking his company to another level. They’re planning to focus on business-to-business work with big brands looking for domestic custom clothing manufacturers. York hopes to fill that void.

“When you’re 18, it’s hard to see the bigger picture, but going to Schoolcraft College set up the rest of my life. I didn’t have student debt to worry about. The classes were small and more personalized. After two years, I was more mature and I needed that time to grow. It was the right choice.”

“When you’re 18, it’s hard to see the bigger picture, but going to Schoolcraft College set up the rest of my life.”

Training Nurses for Tomorrow

More than ever, nurses have to use effective communication skills and have an awareness of the mental health issues facing our community. Psychiatric nursing is a specialty that requires an understanding of mental health disorders, the ability to communicate with various health care providers and to develop a plan of care that is specifically patient centered to their needs.

Brenda Leberge, Barb Levey, Karmen Manoogian, and Laurie Smith RN, MSN are experts in the field of psychiatric nursing care. They teach in the Schoolcraft nursing program and are involved with various community outreach programs.

“We engage students by bringing in community members to educate students on topics such as AIDS, LGBT, transgender, and addiction. We collaborate with agencies such as the National Alliance of the Mentally Ill and CARE House to increase awareness and involvement of our students in the community,” said Smith.

“Our nursing students are well-prepared and educated to treat patients with best practices and optimum treatment,” said Smith. The students from the two-year registered nurse program at Schoolcraft College have a very high success rate on the State Board of Licensing Examination.

“Nursing is a great career with many opportunities and specialties,” said Smith. “The Schoolcraft nursing program is life-changing for students, helping them to reach their educational, social, and economic goals in life.”

Teaching Pharmacology During the Opioid Crisis

Professor Holly Austin teaches pharmacology to the nursing students at Schoolcraft College.

“My goal related to the opioid crisis is to teach the students in pharmacology about the hazards of opioids when administered improperly. Also, how nurses play an important role in reducing the risk of opioid abuse. We need to always apply a stepped approach to pain management using less potent medications first,” said Austin.

Part of her responsibility includes teaching students how health care providers can avoid giving narcotics to patients struggling with addiction or how to minimize side effects for patients who are narcotic naïve. The side effects of narcotics can cause severe respiratory depression and intensive nausea and vomiting.

“Narcotics can cause euphoria when administered improperly which can increase a patient’s risk of addiction,” said Austin. Administering drugs correctly is at the core of solving the crisis.

Austin teaches her students that there are many different types of pain. Postoperative pain is different than cancer pain or chronic pain.

“We need to teach nurses and advanced healthcare providers that using the lowest step available in pain control and incorporating non-pharmacologic methods for pain relief are critical in assisting to end the opioid crisis,” said Austin.

As the primary professor who teaches pharmacology at Schoolcraft, Austin said, “I have been here 15 years and I have had the privilege of teaching more than 1,200 nurses. We have a scientific approach to teaching students what to watch for when giving medications because patient safety is the most important goal. Doctors prescribe medications, but it is nurses who are responsible in many cases for administering the medications and monitoring for adverse effects.”

“We need to teach nurses and advanced healthcare providers that using the lowest step available in pain control and incorporating non-pharmacologic methods for pain relief are critical in assisting to end the opioid crisis.”

Fundraising Success

We would like to express our gratitude to the generous donors, faculty, students and volunteers who give to Schoolcraft College. Philanthropy serves all of us and we are proud to share our achievements with you.

Ways to Give

Donors give generously to their passion and issues that are important to them. At the Schoolcraft College Foundation, we have several options to make that giving easier. The traditional method is to establish direct gifts through an annual giving plan, or consider payroll deduction through their own company (which can offer the potential of a matching gift). Another powerful option is a gift planning strategy that can maximize personal benefits while achieving philanthropic goals. The experts at Schoolcraft College Foundation are available to discuss the many ways to make a gift.

Foundation Awards Nearly $70,000 in Grants

Each year, the Schoolcraft Foundation accepts applications from faculty and staff for awards that are made through interest earned on its unrestricted funds. The Foundation awarded $68,322 in grants for 13 projects/programs along with allocating $10,000 to support “mini-grants,” to meet needs that arise during the year.

In keeping with Schoolcraft’s mission of serving the community, the Foundation also allotted funds to special K-12 programs to inform and engage students in STEM careers. One example is providing Kids on Campus scholarships for students who otherwise couldn’t afford to attend.

Michigan Schools & Government Credit Union

MSGCU is one of the Foundation’s outstanding corporate partners that has established several awards for students graduating from the Schoolcraft College Police & Fire Academies. These awards assist students who are self-paying and not sponsored by local first responder departments. With the generosity of MSGCU, some of this financial burden is lifted for deserving recipients.

The O’Rourke Family

Sgt. Patrick O’Rourke was a 12-year veteran officer with the West Bloomfield Police Department when he responded to a call of “shots fired” on September 9, 2012. Officer O’Rourke was fatally wounded when he attempted to help a suicidal man. He was the first West Bloomfield officer to lose his life in the line of duty. The O’Rourke family established the Patrick O’Rourke Police Academy Award which benefits students pursuing a career in law enforcement. This award is a legacy for Patrick and the entire O’Rourke family.

Donor Spotlight: Stuart & Nora Baker

Stuart Baker began his tenure with Schoolcraft on January 3, 1973. From administrator, counselor, educator, to current member of the Schoolcraft College Foundation Board of Governors, Stuart has shared his time and talents earning him the unofficial title of “Mr. Schoolcraft.”

Stuart and Nora have supported Schoolcraft College since 1987. This year, they are the newest members of the Henry Rowe Schoolcraft Society, established to honor donors who leave a gift to the college in their estate planning. The Bakers generously created a Charitable Gift Annuity with the Foundation, which will not only leave a legacy, but provide this couple with a disposable income stream for years to come. The Bakers serve as a model for everyone to support the mission of Schoolcraft College. Thank you “Mr. and Mrs. Schoolcraft.”

Philanthropy in Motion

When Dr. Gary Krause decided to pursue his interest in Schoolcraft's Culinary Arts Program, little did he know that he would play a pivotal role in the education of a group of students. After graduating, Dr. Krause worked with the Foundation to set up a fund for the culinary program to support a team of five Schoolcraft culinary students to travel to Thailand to participate in the prestigious 2018 International Thaifex Competition. This life-changing experience for these students ended with four gold medals, one silver and one bronze medal.

Employee Giving – Mission Possible Campaign

Titled Mission Possible, Schoolcraft's 2019 Employee Giving Campaign resulted in four departments receiving 100 percent employee participation. The top two departments received a trophy and pizza party. The entire campaign raised $62,000, which is a four percent increase over the previous year. We are pleased to share that approximately 38 percent of full-time staff participated in the campaign.

Lawrence & Christine Hinkle Endowment

Funded by a significant estate gift, The Lawrence and Christine Hinkle Endowment is one of the largest scholarship endowments at Schoolcraft College. The 2019 recipient of their award is Cattrese, an active, organized, single mother of three beautiful children. After raising her siblings, Cattrese returned to school and works two part-time positions, serves as the Vice President of Communications for Phi Theta Kappa and still manages to maintain an impressive GPA in her major of social work and minor in communications at Schoolcraft.

Student Emergency Needs Fund Helps Students

In 2018, the Foundation created a Student Emergency Needs Fund with a $100,000 start-up grant. The purpose of the fund is to provide students with a one-time grant to help them stay in school when they've had an unexpected emergency. The range of grants for last year was $174 to $500. Nearly 70 percent of the students who have received grants since the inception of the fund are still enrolled or have graduated.

Helen is studying Information Technology to refresh her skills and learn new procedures in data software. Helen suffered a serious illness and returning to school demonstrated yet another victory in her recovery. Helen's expenses mounted and jeopardized her living arrangements, leaving her virtually homeless. Falling behind in rent for a much-needed storage unit that held her precious belongings, Helen applied to the Student Emergency Needs Fund and was approved for $500. The award helped Helen stay in school and continue her studies. Helen said, "... the assistance is there and should be used. Don't hesitate, the quicker you apply, the quicker you may receive the help you need."

Nicole is a wife and mother working toward her associate degree while becoming a certified medical coder. Nicole was faced with an unexpected $3,000 car repair bill. She secured a loan for $2,000 but could only add $500 personally. The car was Nicole's only means of transportation to school, work-study program, as well as her family's needs which included her husband's transportation to and from work. She remembered seeing a flyer for the Student Emergency Needs Fund just the week before and at the time thought, "what a cool idea..." never expecting that the Fund would come to her rescue. Nicole was able to pay the remainder of the repair bill and retrieve her car. Nicole said, "Don't be afraid to ask for help when you need it! Do your research, there is funding out there for scholarships, grants and assistance."

Culinary Extravaganza (CulEx) Raises $100,000

On September 15, nearly 800 friends of Schoolcraft College gathered to support the college's signature fundraising event, Culinary Extravaganza. Through the generosity of restaurants, vendors and donors, more than $100,000 was raised and will directly support the culinary program, student scholarships and the Student Emergency Needs Fund.

A warm "THANK YOU" to the restaurants who served delicious food, to the generous sponsors who made the event a huge success, and all the participants who shared a fun afternoon with us!

Thank You for Giving

Henry Rowe Schoolcraft Society

The Henry Rowe Schoolcraft Society was established to honor donors who so strongly believe in the college and our mission that they are dedicated to strengthening and protecting it today, tomorrow, and into the future. They have expressed this commitment by including a gift to the college in their estate planning. Membership in this society stands as a lasting tribute to their generosity and is among the highest honor the Foundation bestows on a donor.
